About Talking Book Services

Talking Book Services, at the South Carolina State Library, provides free informational and recreational reading materials to qualified users in accessible formats. The program serves South Carolinia residents of all ages and income levels who are unable to read or use standard print materials due to visual or physical limitations, temporary and permanent.

Eligibility

Blindness is not the only qualifying condition. Even those with low vision due to macular degeneration, for instance, are eligible. Physical conditions—such as missing arms or hands, lack of muscle coordination, or prolonged weakness—are qualifying conditions when their result is an inability to hold a book or turn pages. Persons with physically-based, medically-certifiable reading disabilities and institutions serving clientele with qualifying conditions are also eligible.

Application

To obtain services, individuals and institutions must submit an application form. The form must be submitted with the signature of a certifying authority. The application and further instructions can be found on our website.

The Talking Book Services Library and South Carolina State Library are closed on official South Carolina state holidays, appearing in italics.

Annual Art Gallery Competition

The Art Gallery is a yearly competition for all current South Carolina students who are blind or visually impaired. Winners are selected in three age groups, and trophies are presented at the opening reception in May. One picture is chosen to receive the State Librarian Award and remains permanently on display at the State Library.
