Filing a Discrimination Complaint with SC Human Affairs Commission

Discrimination is the practice of unfair treatment towards a person or group of people (treating them differently from other people) because of their protected basis (personal characteristic) such as race, color sex, or religion. If the basis was a motivating factor in the incident, then the incident is usually a discriminatory practice.

QUESTIONS

What types of complaints does the SC Human Affairs Commission (SCHAC) investigate?

SCHAC receives, investigates, and resolves individual complaints alleging discrimination of state and federal anti-discrimination laws.

How do I begin the complaint filing process?

The complaint process begins when you complete an intake questionnaire with SCHAC by email, phone, or office visit about a potential discrimination issue.

Who may file a complaint with SCHAC?

Any person who claims to be the victim of employment, housing, or public accommodations discrimination may file a complaint with SCHAC. <https://schac.sc.gov/filing-complaint>

If I file a complaint, can my employer fire me?

It is unlawful for your employer to fire you, or do anything else threatening or harmful to you in retaliation for filing a complaint with the SC Human Affairs Commission. However, you can be terminated for legitimate reasons, despite the fact that you have a complaint filed at the SC Human Affairs Commission.

SCHAC AND EEOC TERMINOLOGY

Complaint: A complaint is an allegation of illegal discrimination that is handled through an administrative procedure. A complaint may result when an employee believes he or she has been unfairly treated because of race, color, national origin, religion, age, sex (including pregnancy), and disability. The allegation itself is not proof that illegal discrimination has taken place. The investigation that follows the acceptance of a formal complaint will provide the basis for a determination as to whether or not illegal discrimination has, in fact, occurred. Once you sign the verified complaint, you are known as the Complainant.

Complainant: An employee, a former employee, or an applicant for employment who files a formal complaint of discrimination based on his/her race, color, religion, sex, national origin, age (40), physical or mental disability, and/or reprisal.

Answers to your questions about SC Pregnancy Discrimination and SC Lactation Support Laws.

What should I know before I file a pregnancy discrimination claim?

If you are facing pregnancy discrimination, here are some things you should know about the law (SC Pregnancy Accommodations Act).

1. The SC Pregnancy Accommodations Act only covers companies with 15 or more employees. However, The SC Lactation Support Act applies to all companies within South Carolina, regardless of size. You can find information about these laws on our website. Legal Division | Human Affairs Commission
2. If you believe you are being discriminated against, it is important to write everything down. Keep details of all incidences of discrimination. Also, you should ensure that all communications with your employer are in writing should they be needed as evidence.
3. The SC Pregnancy Accommodations Act of 2018 was passed to protect employees from sex discrimination to include on the basis of pregnancy, including but not limited to, lactation. This law requires employers with 15 or more employees to provide reasonable accommodations to employees and applicants for medical needs arising from pregnancy, childbirth or related medical condition. Justice Department Secures Groundbreaking Settlement Agreement with Meta Platforms, Formerly Known as Facebook, to Resolve Allegations of Discriminatory Advertising

Lawsuit is the Department’s First Case Challenging Algorithmic Discrimination Under the Fair Housing Act; Meta Agrees to Change its Ad Delivery System

The Department of Justice announced today that it has obtained a settlement agreement resolving allegations that Meta Platforms Inc., formerly known as Facebook Inc., has engaged in discriminatory advertising in violation of the Fair Housing Act (FHA). The proposed agreement resolves a lawsuit filed today in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York alleging that Meta’s housing advertising system discriminates against Facebook users based on their race, color, religion, sex, disability, familial status and national origin. The settlement will not take effect until approved by the court.

Among other things, the complaint alleges that Meta uses algorithms in determining which Facebook users receive housing ads, and that those algorithms rely, in part, on characteristics protected under the FHA. This is the department’s first case challenging algorithmic bias under the Fair Housing Act.

Under the settlement, Meta will stop using an advertising tool for housing ads (known as the “Special Ad Audience” tool) that, according to the department’s complaint, relies on a discriminatory algorithm. Meta also will develop a new system to address racial and other disparities caused by its use of personalization algorithms in its ad delivery system for housing ads. That system will be subject to Department of Justice approval and court oversight.

This settlement marks the first time that Meta will be subject to court oversight for its ad targeting and delivery system.

The complaint alleges that Meta has used three aspects of its advertising system to target and deliver housing-related ads to some Facebook users while excluding other users based on FHA-protected characteristics.

The department’s lawsuit alleges both disparate treatment and disparate impact discrimination. The complaint alleges that Meta is liable for disparate treatment because it intentionally classifies users on the basis of FHA-protected characteristics and designs algorithms that rely on users’ FHA-protected characteristics. The department further alleges that Meta is liable for disparate impact discrimination because the operation of its algorithms affects Facebook users differently on the basis of their membership in protected classes.

PREVENTION CORNER

Prevent Discrimination

1. Set good examples in your behavior, words, and attitudes towards others.
2. Don't make a judgement about someone else based on limited information. (Don't judge a book by its cover).
3. Learn to appreciate diversity.
4. Speak up against discrimination.
5. Educate yourself about what discrimination is and how it harms individuals, groups, and society.
6. Treat everyone with dignity and respect and challenge stereotypes.

Is Discrimination A Learned Behavior?

Albert Bandura's social learning theory "states that behavior is learned from the environment through the process of observational learning" (Bandura, 1977). Therefore, the same way a person can learn aggression from observation, they can also learn unfair or prejudicial treatment of people and groups based on certain personal characteristics such a race, national origin, or disability.

REMINDER:

All People are created equal and deserve to be treated with dignity and respect.
