

Winyah Indigo School

Georgetown, Georgetown County

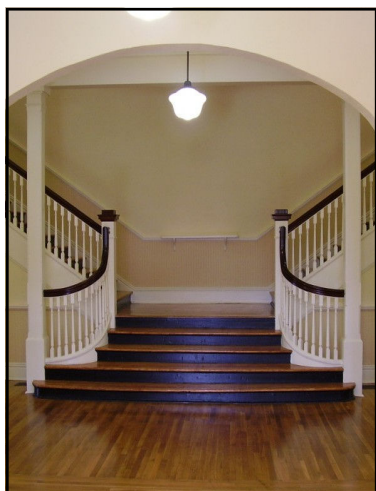

South Carolina Historic Rehabilitation Tax Incentives

Winyah Indigo School, c. 1915

Before

Interior Stairs

Interior Corridor

After

The Winyah Indigo School in Georgetown was constructed in 1908 with a high school wing addition in 1924. In 1985 the students from Winyah were merged into Georgetown High School and the building was abandoned. In 2004, plans to convert the main portions of the school into an ophthalmologist clinic and day surgery center were reviewed and approved by the State Historic Preservation Office for both Federal and South Carolina Historic Rehabilitation Tax Credits.

Work on the school included the rehabilitation of the main and side porticos, the reuse of the historic windows, and the retention of historic classrooms and corridors as waiting rooms, exam rooms, and office space. The large auditorium associated with the school is owned by the City of Georgetown and will undergo rehabilitation for use as a municipal space.

Original Use: School
Current Use: Ophthalmologist Clinic/City of Georgetown Meeting Space
SHPO Contact: Dan Elswick
 (803) 896-6174
 elswick@scdah.state.sc.us

THE South
 Carolina
 Archives
 & History
 Center

HISTORY & HERITAGE
 For All Generations