New Crop Stop Benefits Both Farmers & Schools

Staff photo

The Crop Shop offers about 400 square feet of commercial kitchen space in which farmers can prepare food for schools and other institutions.

The new Crop Stop facility on Johns Island is helping to bridge the gap between farmers and schools. It provides farmers with a place to prepare, process, and package their produce, and in turn they can sell their value-added products to schools and other institutions.

The semi-permanent farm kitchen will soon be S.C. Department of Agriculture certified. It offers versatile space for individual and community use. The appeal of the space is the hourly rate, which can be five times less than typical commercial kitchens. Users must commit to selling a certain percentage of their products in schools, in addition to having the required Hazard Analysis and Critical Control Points training.

This project is a partnership between the College of Charleston, Clemson Extension, and Clemson Architecture Center in Charleston, with funding provided by The Boeing Company.

The first Crop Stop building is 600 square feet, including a 400-square-foot kitchen. It is located on rural Johns Island and the kitchen is managed by Sweet Grass Garden. Future plans call for expansion across the state with grants currently being written for eight more sites in South Carolina.

Glorious Spring

If you're like me, it seems this winter really has been longer than most. Maybe it just seems that way. With ice, numerous spells of freezing weather, and plentiful rain, winter seemed to drag on for months. But now that spring is officially here, we can turn our thoughts to warmer weather, sunshine, spring planting, and a new farming season just around the corner.

As the temperatures rise and the ground softens, it's time to jump into a new growing season. With each new growing season comes a new opportunity for farmers to begin again. As this year, like all years, progresses, farmers will have to deal with fickle Mother Nature, fluctuating prices, and a variety of pests and weeds. But right now, like all years, is the time to be optimistic about a crop's potential. Take a moment to enjoy the sunshine and landscape of the beautiful blooms that will soon turn into tasty fruits and vegetables.

While you are enjoying the warm South Carolina sunshine, you are likely to see a wide variety of crops being planted across our state. Of course, we enjoy all of the flowering shrubs, such as tulip trees, forsythia, and quince, but I would be willing to bet that most of us are more eager to see the bountiful harvests of our favorite produce this summer and fall. Peach trees will soon be covered with lovely pink blossoms stretching across the horizon that represent the millions of peaches we will be eating this summer. Similarly, apples, pears, and other fruit trees will soon be blooming.

Get Ready for Commissioner's Cup BBQ Cook-off

The Commissioner's Cup BBQ Cook-off and Festival is returning to the State Farmers Market for its fourth year on March 21.

This annual event, sanctioned by the Southern Barbecue Network, hosts 40 or more cook teams from the Southeast as they compete for the title of South Carolina State Champion.

Participants have the chance to win from $300 to $1,000 in cash prizes in Boston Butt and Pork Rib categories.

The event will be open to the public from 11 a.m. – 3 p.m. on March 21. Admission to the festival is $5 per person, and children 12 and under can get in free with a donation of three cans of food to Harvest Hope. Attendees will enjoy live music, a children's play area, tasting barbecue samples (while supplies last), and looking at antique tractors and farm equipment.

Food vendors will be on site selling barbecue plates and other foods. For more information on cook team applications or the festival, contact Elizabeth Shuler at eshuler@scda.sc.gov.

To help ensure that we will be enjoying these fresh, local products in the months to come, home gardeners should be preparing their soil, if they haven't done so already, for tomatoes, squash, cantaloupes, sweet corn, and a host of other delicious fresh vegetables. Commercial growers have their greenhouses full of produce that will be available at local farmers' markets before you can say the blessing.

On the row crop side, farmers begin planting corn this month, while peanuts and cotton are not too long behind. Winter wheat seems to be thriving, and once it's harvested, farmers will most likely plant soybeans or perhaps sorghum as a second crop.

We will soon be getting lots of calls from folks who want to know when their favorite goodies will be ready, and lots more calls from the folks who are selling, or want to sell, Certified SC products. The Market Bulletin has listings for lots of delicious products like strawberries and blueberries.

We love to see the grass in our pastures growing, which means that grazing animals like dairy cows and horses will soon have abundant grazing. Lush grass also means a good hay crop for the summer as the cycle continues. I'm sorry to have to remind you, but it also means that it's time to service the lawnmower for a busy summer season.

Flowers have become an important part of our lives and our economy. Nurseries across the state are gearing up for record sales as consumers seek to beautify their yards and living spaces. Ranked in the top five of our crops for revenue, horticulture has become big business, as has landscape design.

I hope you are able to take some time to enjoy spring in your part of the world. Come August, with its heat and humidity, it's easy to appreciate our spring season. Experience the fun outdoor activities planned across the state. There are several events planned at the State Farmers Markets that you don't want to miss. Daylight Savings Time came early this year, so take advantage of the extended sunlight and beautiful spring weather to get outdoors, get moving, and enjoy nature.

Governor's Conference Celebrates 50 Years with Food, Fun

The annual Governor's Conference on Tourism & Travel, sponsored by SC Parks, Recreation and Tourism, celebrated its 50th anniversary this year. One of its newest topics was agritourism, which combines tourism and agriculture.

The $18 billion tourism industry is one of the state's largest, ranking just behind agriculture in terms of money generated for the state. The three-day conference, held at Myrtle Beach on Feb. 9-11, was titled "Celebrating 50 Years of Tourism Success."

One of the most popular sessions was lunch on Feb. 10 with the state's four Chef Ambassadors. Taking the stage in pairs, the chefs prepared their innovative dishes using local food, including creamed collards, corn maque choux, sweet cornbread waffles, and Huguenot torte. The chef at the Embassy Suites had prepared those dishes for the buffet line, so the audience was actually eating the foods they saw being cooked.

Another interesting presentation dealing with food was from Chef Jeff Henderson, whose syndicated TV show "Flip My Food" can be seen on WIS-TV. Chef Jeff shared his life story, from his younger days as a drug dealer with a million-dollar lifestyle to years in prison to subsequently remaking his life. He learned to cook while in prison, then determined to parlay his skills into a new life.

Brookgreen Gardens is known for exquisite sculpture in the state's best known public garden.

Many of the topics dealt with social and traditional media. In one session, senior editors from Family Circle, Garden & Gun, and Southern Living shared tips for getting stories published. Another presentation on "disruptive thinking" dealt with using new strategies.

The Governor's Conference always offers side trips to local popular venues. One group did a nostalgic tour of old Myrtle Beach, while another spent an afternoon at world-famous Brookgreen Gardens.

At the Golden Jubilee Gala, PRT had put together a wall display covering the agency's 50 years in the tourism industry. Next year's conference will be held in Charleston.

The Mission of the South Carolina Peanut Board

The South Carolina Peanut Board is a farmer-led organization whose mission is to increase consumer awareness and consumption of peanuts while creating a positive economic impact for producers. The board offers several services including educational packages (teacher kits) and educational videos for teachers.

Also, posters and small packages of peanuts are available. Several different types of recipes are available along with other consumer information. Funding for board activities comes solely from producer assessments. The board of directors is made up of peanut producers elected by peanut producers from South Carolina.

The South Carolina Peanut Board will be at the Charleston Cooper River Bridge Run health and fitness expo on Thursday, March 26 and Friday, March 27. They will be handing out promotional items, recipes, brochures, peanut butter packets, and peanut packets and hope to see you there!

PB Chocolate Coated Cherries

2 10 oz. jars Maraschino cherries with stems
1 cup crunchy peanut butter
1 cup confectioners' sugar
24 oz. chocolate bark coating
Small paper muffin/candy cups

Drain cherries, leaving stems intact. Mix peanut butter and sugar in a mixing bowl until thoroughly combined. Flatten one tablespoon of peanut butter mixture into a two-inch diameter disc. Lay a cherry on top of the peanut butter disc with the stem pointing up and work it up around the cherry so that the cherry is completely coated. Place each enrobed cherry on a baking sheet covered with waxed paper and freeze for about five minutes to chill slightly.

While the cherries chill, melt chocolate according to package directions. Dip cherries one at a time in the melted chocolate and allow the excess chocolate to drip off. Place in a paper candy cup and allow to cool until chocolate is firm.

Rogers Brothers Adding Peanut Processing Plant

Rogers Brothers Farm near Hartsville is expanding in a big way. A $6 million investment creates three entities that represent the family's efforts to diversify and grow.

Rogers Brothers Farm, which includes around 8,000 acres, grows cotton, corn, peanuts, soybeans and wheat. Rogers Brothers Peanuts sells seed peanuts, and buys it peanuts from other growers. Gillespie Peanuts sells roasted peanuts to a niche market and will eventually buy, store and shell them in its new 80,000-square-foot facility in Lydia.

CEO and founder Gill Rogers said the decision to go into processing came as a necessity. "We decided to build a shelling plant and warehouses to market our own peanuts instead of selling to another company," he said. The shelling and processing is a new venture that will allow Rogers Brothers to process up to 10 tons of peanuts per hour. Construction for the processing facility will be complete in July, before the next harvest season. The expansions will add 30 new jobs.

Gill's son, Charles Rogers, is general manager of Rogers Brothers Peanuts and Gillespie Peanuts. "We thought having a South Carolina certified product and having a product come from our farm would add more value," Charles explained.

Although Rogers Brothers Peanuts is new to shelling, the farm has been growing peanuts for about 10 years. Last year they bought about 3,200 acres of peanuts, and more than half of that came from their farm. Peanuts are more profitable than cotton or tobacco, and a lot of the land suitable for tobacco is suitable for peanuts.

The new venture into peanut processing is a big step. "I've always heard if something isn't terrifying and exciting at the same time it's not worth doing," Charles said. "The sky's the limit but we're going to start with South Carolina."

Gillespie Peanuts are noted for taste and freshness. Watch for Gillespie Peanuts in specialty shops, markets and hardware stores. Before too long the brand will be showing up in 60 Bi-Lo grocery stores in the state
