AGENCY'S DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

I. Risk Assessment and Mitigation Strategies: In this subsection, the agency is required to identify the potential most negative impact on the public as a result of the agency's failure in accomplishing its goals and objectives. The agency also should explain the nature and level of outside help it may need to mitigate such negative impact on the public. Lastly, the agency should list three options for what the General Assembly could do to help resolve the issue before it became a crisis.

DNR's Five Main Programmatic Goals are:

Goal 1 - Division of Land, Water & Conservation (LWC)

Develop and Implement programs that study, manage and conserve the State's Land and Water Resources through planning, research, technical assistance, public education and the development of a comprehensive natural resources database.

Goal 2 – Law Enforcement Division (LE)

Conserve and protect the state's natural resources for social, economic, recreational, and commercial benefit while providing maximum human utilization through: (1) the development of public support through outreach, education, and safety programs; (2) the preservation of the peace and protection of human lives and property; and (3) the enforcement of the state's criminal laws through the detection, apprehension, and prosecution of persons who violate those laws.

Goal 3 - Marine Resources Division (MRD)

To sustain the State's living marine resources for the cultural, recreational, commercial and economic benefit of the state's citizens and visitors.

Goal 4 - Wildlife & Freshwater Fisheries (WFF)

Monitor and protect wildlife species and inland aquatic species and their habitats throughout the state and provide recreational hunting and fishing opportunities to the public.

Goal 5 – Executive and Support Services

To continuously evaluate and improve administrative and business processes, efficiency, effectiveness and internal and external service delivery with a focus on transparency, communication, accountability and the integration of new technologies.

Potentially the most negative impact on the public as a result of the DNR failing to accomplish its goals and objectives would be the lack of accurate and credible science, coupled with credible mechanisms and processes to aid in decision making relating to the utilization and allocation of the state’s finite resources. There has been a steady trend of increased pressure on the state’s natural resources due to increasing population and business growth, combined with the increased desire and interest in the use of the state’s natural resources, both recreationally and commercially. This impact is interwoven through three distinct areas which are: 1) the sustainability, management and protection of the state’s natural resources; 2) the public’s safety while utilizing the state’s natural resources; and 3) the economic impacts surrounding the protection and use of the state’s natural resources.

Through its five programmatic divisions the DNR is constantly broadening its strategies to address the impacts of population growth, habitat loss, environmental alterations, overuse and other challenges faced in protecting, enhancing, and managing diverse natural resources. This approach is complemented by outreach initiatives with the aim of maintaining continued engagement with constituents, stakeholders and partners. At the same time, the DNR has also expanded all facets of its outreach programs to better educate those who currently are not engaged or knowledgeable about the current impacts on the state’s natural resources.

One of the agency’s emerging issues is balancing the natural resource needs of a changing population. The agency deals with increased human/animal interactions as the human population grows. Population growth also requires the agency to focus on protecting habitats for the natural communities that occur within the state, in order to maintain their viability. Most of the land management focuses on consumptive use of natural resources and we have increasing interest in providing access to non-consumptive users who also have access to SCDNR-managed properties. Management for multi-species conservation will be important going forward. For example, the department organized the SC Quail Council, a large partnership to guide and support the South Carolina Bobwhite Initiative to restore habitat and recover populations of the bobwhite quail and associated non-game bird species in long-term decline. In addition, the increasing demand for recreational boating opportunities requires additional officers to spend time on the water during non-traditional boating months. With more than 500,000 registered boats, currently 7th in the nation, South Carolina annually ranks as one of the top ten states in the nation for registered boats.

A focus for the agency is expanding minority and non-consumptive constituents’ input and participation in natural resource policy. The SCDNR has in place outreach initiatives that connect with African-American and Hispanic communities, as well as programs that could lead non-consumptive users to, at the minimum, appreciate the outdoors with the potential of creating more sportsmen and sportswomen. The SCDNR hopes to have more ways of engaging minorities and non-consumptive users to participate on advisory boards, panels and task forces. The agency also encourages youth to get involved in outdoor activities, to instill a conservation ethic and to appreciate and protect the natural resources of the state.

As the state’s population grows, and the state continues to protect watersheds, habitat, and other public lands, SCDNR’s funding and staffing levels have not grown to keep up with the demand. Because of population growth, the state is facing continued water-related issues that have dominated headlines with increasing political attention. As the water resource planning agency for the state, the SCDNR is responsible for monitoring and analyzing water resource information and developing state water plans.

AGENCY NAME:	Department of Natural Resources
AGENCY CODE:	P240	SECTION:	47

Maintaining funding and enhancing funding is critical for the SCDNR so that these responsibilities will not be compromised.

Dealing with increased public use of natural lands managed by the agency, balancing protection of the natural characteristics of these lands, and providing public recreation and education will become more challenging in the future. Wildlife Management Area (WMA) properties are enjoyed by hundreds of thousands of residents and non-residents a year. The SCDNR manages more than 1 million acres of public access lands for hunting, fishing, boating, and hiking for the enjoyment of both consumptive and non-consumptive users. Although WMAs are enjoyed by all, they are primarily financially supported by the sportsmen and sportswomen of this state. SCDNR collects visitor use information on select, high-use WMAs across the state for the purpose of determining user characteristics and evaluating the types of uses of SCDNR properties. Among non-hunting users, birdwatching, wildlife viewing, fishing and photography are the most popular activities. Over a two-year period, over 5,800 non-hunting users visited four coastal WMAs. During the same time period, 3,663 hunters also used those same properties. In addition, Botany Bay WMA annually receives between 50,000 and 60,000 visitors, the vast majority of who are visiting the property for purposes other than hunting.

The General Assembly can help resolve the aforementioned issues before the state/DNR faces a crisis by:

A. Increase Funding

The SCDNR is challenged to meet its mission to the public and the natural resources of this state due to inadequate funding. The agency historically has been at risk for deeper cuts than other agencies during negative budget cycles, which can make the recovery from those cuts extend for a longer period of time. The changing federal budget climate is a concern for the department as the agency relies heavily on federal funds to operate. For example, in FY 2017, 45 percent of the Marine Resources Division (MRD) expenditures were supported by federal funding. Given the uncertainty associated with the federal budget picture, many federally funded projects at the department of great import to South Carolina residents may be in jeopardy due to lack of funding. The agency has tried to do the best it can with limited resources by using state funds to leverage federal funds for projects in research, monitoring, stewardship, and outreach. As an example, state appropriated expenditures of $2,302,415 leveraged $15,375,701 in federal and other fund expenditures for MRD, over a six-fold return on investment of state appropriated funds in FY 2017. To use these federal funds, the state is required to use state funds as match, thus creating a budgetary challenge for many programs. For example, Law Enforcement has had to use state funds from their operational budget as matching funds, which negatively affects overall field operations.

The SCDNR requires stable, recurring state funding, as well as adequate operating funds to match Federal grants, and needs restoration of the many FTE's lost in budget cuts beginning in FY 2010 in order to better address the agency's mission. Finding new and adequate funding streams to successfully protect and manage the state's natural and cultural resources remains a continuing challenge. As one concern, the department needs to obtain recurring funding for expanding the stream gage and groundwater monitoring network needed to accurately measure water availability and assist in forecasting and analyzing flood and drought conditions throughout the state.

The agency needs to expand its outreach efforts by educating the people of South Carolina about the importance of natural resources and how to wisely manage them. For example, the agency’s ability to sustain marine resources in the face of increasing pressures from fishing, habitat loss, and water quality degradation, is largely dependent upon our credibility as an agency and our ability to promote behaviors that allow sustained use and protection over time.

The advent of new communication tools, notably social media, poses both a challenge and an opportunity as we continue to try to sustain/enhance a conservation ethic in South Carolina residents and visitors who enjoy our natural resources. Also, it is vital that SCDNR has the resources to maintain and enhance the technological capabilities needed in order to meet the ever-increasing licensing and registration demands. The current Licensing, Boat Titling and Registration System is in need of significant modernization. The goal in modernizing the system would be a new enterprise system that will require the following: the integration of the customer data across all agency licensing, boating and financial platforms; streamlined steps in data processing that will increase turnaround times; a secure external customer account access portal; a design infrastructure that will allow for greater ease and flexibility in program changes; and platforms for Point of Sale and internet call center transactions, commercial licensing and permitted marine dealers.

The lack of stable and adequate funding is also evident in the Law Enforcement Division. There are increased budgetary demands on the Law Enforcement Division due to the growing assistance requests for a more traditional law enforcement role versus resource focused enforcement role. As a first responder agency we are called to assist other state and local agencies weekly in traditional law enforcement responses such as man hunts, civil disturbance, event security, and general assistance calls. Last fiscal year alone the Law Enforcement Division has more than 20,000 man hours assisting other agencies. Additionally, there is a challenge ensuring officer safety and readiness due to the changing views and challenges in the Law Enforcement environment. Increased federal and state mandates, including, updating safety equipment, providing training for encounters with the public in both violent and non-violent settings, and requirements for specific equipment, training, and funding for law enforcement remains a challenge.

B. Fund Facility/Equipment Needs

The department’s main boating customer service area is currently located on the first floor of the Rembert C. Dennis Building, fronting Assembly Street, on the State House grounds. This location has become increasingly problematic for public access. The City of Columbia has steadily reduced the number of street parking spaces on Assembly Street. This change has had a direct and negative impact on those boating and sporting customers attempting to do business with the department. When the opportunity arose to move our licensing section to the State Farmers Market, the department took that opportunity in January of 2016, leaving the boating customer service section at the Assembly Street location. As impending development and street-scaping along Assembly Street continues, the traffic congestion and lack of parking will continue to be a problem for those seeking boating services. The SCDNR is exploring all options that will make the entire department more accessible to the public. In line with accessibility concerns, the agency must keep all facilities compliant with the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA). A Self Evaluation and Transition Plan that identified ADA needs for SCDNR facilities was submitted to the US Fish and Wildlife Service in 2012 and is continually reviewed for progress.

The infrastructure is aging at the Marine Resources Center in Charleston, the Waddell Mariculture Center in Bluffton, and the McKenzie Field Station in Bennett’s Point. Additionally, the agency’s ocean-going research vessel fleet is in need of repairs. These facilities and assets were acquired and constructed with appropriated funds and do not have a dedicated revenue stream with which to rehabilitate, and/or replace them.

C. Assist with Competitive Salaries

The SCDNR has recognized for many years that improving salaries is a key component to recruitment and retention of highly qualified individuals. The agency’s staff are the most valuable asset, and long-term success is driven by sustained commitment to conservation, stewardship, and science. The agency has lost 152 FTEs since the budget cuts of FY 2011. Changing workforce and sociodemographic patterns have created a more mobile workforce, and studies reveal that today’s workers are more likely to change careers several times. Retention of high-performing employees is critical to ensuring sustained success in resources stewardship. With the end of the TERI program, this concern is heightened. The department needs to secure additional funding to ensure salary obligations can be met, while still providing optimal support of SCDNR operations. Providing salaries for employees that are regionally competitive and providing adequate training and mentoring in order to prepare younger staff for succession as older staff retire is problematic.

In addition, keeping a well trained and experienced force of conservation officers who are required to work three weekends a month and most major holidays is difficult with the new generation of officers graduating from the police academy. Maintaining this force, however, is critical with the increasing demands placed on the agency’s Law Enforcement Division outside of the traditional role of game wardens.
