Calculating the Value of Lime - 2016-05

OCLC#: 984996085

Correcting low soil pH is an important part of growing agronomic crops. In South Carolina, most soils are naturally acidic and agricultural fields may become more acidic over time due to nitrogen fertilizer application. Liming the soil is necessary if the soil pH needs to be raised for ideal crop growth. It is important for agricultural growers to make informed decisions on the best liming material to purchase and understand what value they are getting. This publication aims to answer the following question for growers: How can I compare different lime analyses to determine what material is best for my crops and what is the best value economically?

The Spread and Extent of Irrigation in South Carolina by Crop Group from 1997 to 2012 - 2017-01

Farmers in South Carolina and elsewhere irrigate to increase their yields. Farmers also irrigate to reduce their risks, some of which depend on climatic variability. Have the number of irrigators increased and has irrigation also spread in South Carolina during 1997-2012? What has been the spread and extent of irrigation by groups of crops during the same period? Answers to these questions in this report are based on data from the four, most recent Censuses of Agriculture.
